Indian independence act passed on

The Indian Independence Act 1947 was the statute (10 and 11 Geo VI, c. 30) enacted by the Parliament of the United Kingdom promulgating the partition of India and the independence of the dominions of Pakistan and India. The Act received royal assent on July 18, 1947. The legislation was formulated by the government of Prime Minister Clement Atlee, after representatives of the Indian National Congress, the Muslim League, and the Sikh community came to an agreement with the Viceroy of India, Lord Mountbatten of Burma, on what has come to be known as the 3 June Plan or Mountbatten Plan. Lord Mountbatten, India's last Viceroy, released a plan on the country's independence from the British on June 3, 1947. The plan, also known as the Mountbatten Plan, came to be celebrated as the 'last plan for independence'. Mountbatten was appointed Viceroy to India to speed up the process of transfer of power by the then British prime minister Clement Atlee. After his 'Dickie Bird Plan', under which he proposed that the provinces be declared independent successor states and be allowed to choose whether to join the constituent assembly or not, was opposed by Jawaharlal Nehru, he decided to abort it and come up with the June 3 plan. Here is all you need to know about the Mountbatten Plan: The June 3 plan announced that India would be splitting into two nations after its independence – India and Pakistan. The division came into effect on August 15, 1947. The plan included the principles of partition and gave autonomy and sovereignty to both India and Pakistan. It also gave the nations the right to form their own constitution. Under this plan, the Princely states, such as Jammu and Kashmir, were given a choice to either remain independent or join India or Pakistan. - Unlike the Dickie Bird Plan, this plan was accepted by both the Congress and the Muslim League. - The Indian Independence Act of 1947, which was passed in the British Parliament and received the royal assent on 18 July 1947, was drafted based on the Mountbatten Plan. - According to this plan, the British monarch would no longer use the title 'Emperor of India' and the British Parliament could not enact any law that would be binding on either of the two nations. - Until the formation of new constitutions, the Governor-General was made a constitutional head. He was made responsible for assenting to laws passed by the constituent assemblies of the nations as part of this plan. SHARE THIS ARTICLE ON Preview Preview The Indian Independence Act was passed in 1947. The act created two new independent dominions; India and Pakistan. Pakistan was split into Pakistan and East Pakistan which is now Bangladesh. The Bengal and Punjab provinces were partitioned between the two new countries. These dominions separated the Muslim, Hindu and Sikh population and caused the biggest forced migration which has ever happened that was not the result of war or famine. The Act repealed the use of 'Emperor of India' as a title for the British Crown and ended all existing treaties with the princely states. Lord Mountbatten continued as Governor-General and Jawaharlal Nehru was appointed India's first Prime Minister, Muhammad Ali Jinnah became Pakistan's Governor-General and Liaquat Ali Khan its Prime Minister. The 15th August 1947 has since become celebrated as India' and Pakistan's Independence Day. Something went wrong. Wait a moment and try again. "to make provision for the setting up in India of two independent Dominions, to substitute other provisions for certain provisions of the Government of India Act, 1935, which apply outside those Dominions, and to provide for other matters consequential on or connected with the setting up of those Dominions," presented by the Prime Minister; supported by Sir Stafford Cripps, Mr. Alexander and Mr. Arthur Henderson; to be read a Second time upon Monday next, and to be printed.
