If a website is disorganized, confusing, hard to read or just plain ugly, chances are, you're going to move on. And - if this poorly designed website is yours - guess what? You just lost a potential client. Thankfully, when designing a website, you don't have to start from scratch. There are literally thousands of HTML5 templates available on the Internet. Some are free; some are not. Some are easy to work with; others - well, not so much. With so many free HTML5 templates from which to choose, how do you know which one is right? In addition to working well, your template should match your personality and fit your site. If you're a photographer, and you want to showcase your work, look for an appropriate template - perhaps one with a nice image gallery option. Why HTML5? So why choose a free HTML5 template? Simple. HTML5 offers cleaner code. Okay, that's not the only reason, but it is one of the best reasons! Sure, HTML5 lets you add audio and video support without having to rely on third-party plugins like Flash; it uses local storage; it provides a more dynamic user-experience; and it can even be used for game development; but the fact is - clean code makes me happy and when you start customizing your site, I bet it'll make you happy too. How were these selected? The following list of 10 FREE HTML5 templates are ones I personally like and would use on any of my sites. I like simple, elegant designs. I was on the lookout for features like: Responsive design, Parallax effects, Ghost buttons, Easy-to-customize. So, without further ado, let's have a look at which ones made the cut.

01. Ultra-Modern Free Responsive Design Agency Theme (opens in new tab) This is a great free HTML5 template for showcasing your work. This freebie offers responsive design and works best for those who wish to showcase their work. Its vibrant, modern look includes parallax effects, large buttons and an emphasis on typography.
02. Free HTML5 Theme with Modern Streak to Revet Design Studio Site (opens in new tab) This free HTML5 template has a more minimal look. Looking for something a little less vibrant? This minimalist design features blurred images, negative space and ghost buttons.
03. Modern Vintage Twist in Free HTML5 Theme for Exterior Design Website (opens in new tab) This is a retro but responsive template. One of my favorite templates from TemplateMonster is this retro and responsive design. It offers natural colors, blurred images and hexagon shapes.
04. Spacial (opens in new tab) This HTML5 template offers parallax effects. This minimalist and spacious design offers a large cover image, parallax effects and crisp, clean font. Perfect for the blogger.
05. Ion (opens in new tab) This responsive HTML5 template is subtle. Another responsive, minimalist design. Ion offers additional options such as a right or left sidebar. The beauty of this design is in its subtly.
06. HTML5 UP (opens in new tab) Clearly, my favorite. HTML5 UP offers fully responsive HTML5 + CSS3 templates. Each of their templates are 100 per cent free and licensed under the Creative Commons.
07. Strongly Typed (opens in new tab) This free HTML5 template is great for bloggers. Dropdown menus, sidebars, large buttons, icons and more. Strongly Typed offers the frequent blogger one heck of a design. While I wouldn't consider this to be my favorite, it is definitely on the top-ten.
08. Strata (opens in new tab) Another great showcasing template. Strata was one of the first templates I discovered on HTML5 UP. It offers a stationary left sidebar, parallax effects and lightbox. This template would be great for a photographer or other creative looking to showcase their work.
09. Highlights (opens in new tab) This free HTML5 template is a single-pager. Our first single-pager in the group, Highlights offers a simple, responsive design. Not only does it look great, but it functions well too. Scrolling is smooth and the background transitions are simply fantastic.
10. Halcyonic (opens in new tab) This template offers huge flexibility. With five unique page layouts, the Halcyonic responsive HTML5 + CSS template feels like the workhorse of the bunch. I'd be surprised if you couldn't find a layout that works for you. The color scheme is easy on the eyes, yet bold; and the slight texture works well.

Personal favorite: Eventually (opens in new tab) Our author uses this template for her own site! Okay, I bet my editor is going to kill me since this was supposed to be a '10 best' feature, but there was no way I could write this list and leave this one out. If you're looking for a simple template you can use to broadcast your next big thing... stop looking! This is the one. In fact, this is the one I'm personally using (opens in new tab) for just that reason. Like this? Read these... Thank you for reading 5 articles this month* Join now for unlimited access. Quicken financial management software, with all its choices, instructions and options can be overwhelming, especially for a new user. Everything seems equally important, and everything seems like you need to master it right now. Before diving in and starting the process of using accounts, creating reports and filling in budget amounts, it is important to learn a few basic concepts that can help you optimize Quicken for your individual needs. One of the most important concepts to understand is how to use categories and tags to track your account transactions. A Quicken category is a label, such as Groceries or Household, that defines a broad group of both income and expense transactions. You use a single category per transaction to track how you earn and spend money. For example, all grocery purchases, no matter where you buy them, go under the Groceries category and all income, regardless of the source, goes in the Income category. Use a subcategory to provide greater organization and detail within a category and for assistance in creating a budget. This is especially useful in a category such as Auto, where you incur multiple types of expenses. Creating subcategories for fuel, maintenance and registration makes it much easier to see where your money is going. Tags are like keywords. They allow you to track transactions within and across category groups. For example, if you want to track the money you spend on incidentals for a child in college, create a tag with the name of the child and then apply it to the appropriate category or subcategory, such as Groceries, Auto: Fuel, or Telephone: Cell phone. Quicken comes with numerous built-in categories that cover many standard items. Not all built-in categories are visible from the Category List window, as much of what you see depends on information you give Quicken during set-up. Before creating a new category, access Quicken's built-in categories and see if something appropriate is already there. To access built-in categories, choose "Tools" from the main menu, then choose "Category List." Click the "Add Categories" button, select the categories you wish to add from the menu on the left side of the screen, and click the "Add" button. Click "OK" to finish and return to the Categories List. To add a new category or subcategory, click the "New" button in the Categories List window, create a name for the category or subcategory, provide an optional description, and indicate category type, such as Income, Expense or Subcategory. If you choose "Subcategory," use the drop-down box next to the selection to indicate the main category name. To create a new tag, choose "Tools" from the main menu, then select "Tag List." Click the "New" button at the top of the window and type in a name and optional description for the tag. Ignore the "Copy Number" box as it applies to tracking rental properties only. Click "OK" to finish. While it is possible to create categories, subcategories and tags "on the fly," this is not always a good option, especially if you are frustrated or simply trying to "make it fit." Putting thought into the categories, subcategories and tags you use can make Quicken work better and more efficiently. Use categories, subcategories and tags within transaction registers to identify and organize income and expenses. For example, in a checking account register, after entering the payee and amount of the check, click the drop-down box under the payee name to select either the category or subcategory of the transaction. Tab over or click in the next box to select the appropriate Tag from its drop-down list. At the end of the month, run a report that will show an income/spending breakdown by category, subcategory and tag. For example, to run a standard Quicken spending report, click "Reports" from the main menu. Select "Spending" and then "Spending by Category" to view the report and accompanying pie chart. The Spending report defaults to a year-to-date listing, so adjust date parameters to your needs. The web is changing. Now that all modern desktop and mobile browsers support HTML5 and Adobe has discontinued Flash for mobile browsers, it's time to think about which delivery method to choose - and certainly for mobile platforms. HTML5 is the best option for interactive content. Hype (available from the Mac App Store (opens in new tab)) creates animated and interactive HTML5 content, without requiring you to write a single line of code. In this tutorial, we're going to create an animated HTML5 banner using Hype's simple, yet powerful, scene editor and keyframe-based animation system. By the end, you'll know how to build and animate a scene, and how to respond to scene and user events.

- 01 To start, first add your assets to the scene by dragging your images into a new Hype scene. Arrange the photos from nearest to furthest away using the Arrange menu, which has several different ways to arrange and resize objects.
- 02 Turn on recording by clicking the Record button on the right-hand side of the Animation controls. Advance the time cursor to three seconds and move the sky, mountains, hills and grass to the left. Moving each image further than the one behind it creates an engaging parallax effect. Finally, move the soccer ball from the left edge of the scene to the right. Click the Record button again to turn off recording and click Play to preview.
- 03 Select the soccer ball element in Hype's Elements list and click on the Properties menu that appears. Select the Rotation Angle property and click the soccer ball's disclosure triangle to reveal its properties. Select the new property and reset the time cursor to the beginning. Click the KeyFrame button to add a starting key frame. Advance the timeline to three seconds and click the Key Frame button again to create an ending key frame. Rotate the soccer ball by switching to Hype's Metrics Inspector and changing its Z-axis rotation value to 1080 degrees.
- 04 Changing the soccer ball's animation timing functions will make it move more naturally across the skyline. To change the timing function for its horizontal movement, double-click the animation for Origin (Left) and select the Linear timing function. Perform the same action on the soccer ball's other animations to create a very natural-looking effect.
- 05 When this scene has finished playing, we need to automatically transition to our banner's final scene. Switch to the Scene Inspector to see Hype's scene-specific actions. Click the Action menu associated with the On Animation Complete action and select 'Jump to Scene...' This adds Scene and Transition menus that are automatically set to instantly transition to the next scene.
