Among Us After the release of Among Us, it seems the golden period of Android gaming has truly arrived. One of the highest played games this quarter, it has surpassed some of the most popular games like Fall Guys and has been topping charts across the world. It's an online multiplayer game with a unique social deduction theme. By the way, the game can also be played over local WiFi with 4 to 10 players. Coming to the gaming theme, here you prepare your spaceship for departure along with other teammates, but bear in mind, there are impostors in your team who want to kill everyone. The impostors blend in with the rest of the crewmates to build trust, but soon chaos ensues as you find dead bodies of one of your teammates. The suspicion among crewmates gets heightened and voting is done to find and kick the impostor off the spaceship. But you rarely get it right and the chaos continues. Amid all this, you have to complete tasks like maintaining the fuel of the spaceship, power supply and other things. You can interact with other crewmates via text chat and if that's not good enough for you, you can use your own Discord server. All in all, Among Us is one of the best online multiplayer games on Android right now and you can't afford to miss it. PUBG Mobile PUBG Mobile is undoubtedly one of the best online multiplayer Android games. That said, if you don't like BGMI, check out our best PUBG alternatives list for some other options. Coming to the game, it's a battle royale game where 100 players drop down on an island to gather weapons, and fight to become the last man (or squad) standing. Fortnite Fortnite is another game that needs no introduction. This is also one of the best battle royale games that's really fun to play online against other players. Fortnite is considerably different from PUBG though. It uses cartoonish graphics and a lot of fun elements to make the game lighthearted. Plus there's a whole building mechanism involved here that no other online Android multiplayer game offers. The game also gets fresh content with weekly patches so no matter when you drop down to play the game, there will be something new happening in it. It's a really awesome game, but it can be quite difficult to master thanks to the difficult gun mechanics and building system that is central to playing it. Bear in mind, the game is not available on the Play Store so you will have to install it from other sources. You can follow our guide and install Fortnite on Android without Play Store. Genre, No of Players: Battle Royale, 100 Pros High-quality graphics100-player battle royaleMultiple gaming modesGameplay is excellent Cons Needs high storageNot compatible with all devices Download: Epic Games, Samsung Galaxy Store (Free, offers in-app purchases) 4. Garena Free Fire If you're not yet comfortable jumping into a high-capacity fight, Free Fire - Battlegrounds could be the online multiplayer game you'd like to try out first. The controls are all on the screen and simple to navigate, but the highlight for you is that only have to go against 49 other users in a 10-minute window to survive until the end. That's a quick multiplayer game to hone all your skills before an intense battle. The basics of the battle royale mode all remain the same. You'll drop on a remote island and will have to find good weapons, as well as medkits, and stay inside the safe zone to win the battle. You could also form 4-man squads and talk amongst yourselves to devise a strategy with in-game voice chat. Their graphics are smooth, so you wouldn't necessarily face any lag during the gameplay. The gameplay is smooth, the graphics look stunning with the addition of more neon-color nitro boost effects and the overall experience is simply unbeatable. But what's new here? First, there is a new control mechanism called TouchDrive which relies on swipes to steer the car and makes the gameplay considerably easier, however, you can always revert back to the old tilt and tap-to-steer controls. Also, you no longer need to slow down and perform a drift to gain a bit of nitro juice, as the Asphalt 9: Legends will let you do so by just doing a 360-degree turn during the cruise to earn the boost without losing speed. The Club leaderboard is another new addition and in case you are wondering, over 60 seasons and 800 events (with more being added regularly) will keep you engaged for a long, long time.
