In Arizona, students looking to earn their GED diploma can take the four separate GED subtests at one of Arizona's testing centers or online. This website offers free GED online classes to help you discover if online studying fits you well. If so, continue with the accredited, comprehensive GED Prep Course developed by Onsego and get ready for the four GED sub-exams fast. To register for the GED test, candidates must set up their account with the website GED.com. We offer free support in the form of a limited number of free video lessons and practice tests. Onsego GED Prep Pass the GED Test in 2 Months Learn Just 1 Hour a Day. It doesn't matter when you left school. Arizona is offering the computer-based GED exam for the state's high school equivalency testing program. The GED program offers adults who didn't finish high school the chance to earn a credential that's equivalent to a high school diploma. The testing fee for the GED in Arizona is $164 for the complete test (computer-based) or $41 per module when done at a test center. Online testing will set you back $41 per subtest as well ($164 overall). You have the liberty to take the four subtests one (or more) at a time. Retesting is offered at a reduced rate, but this only counts for on-site testing. Onsego GED Prep Online GED Classes Lessons Simply Explained | Practice Tests | Add-ons Preview Onsego Now You can retake a subtest twice without any waiting period, but if you've failed these attempts, there is a 60-day waiting period before you can retake that subject test. For your first two retakes within a year, discounted fees apply. After these discounted retakes, regular fees apply. If you fail again, you'll get two more retakes at a reduced rate. The $29 test fee will be waived, though a $10 testing center fee will apply in Arizona for retakes. Again, this does NOT apply to online testing. The GED test passing score is 145 points on each module (subtest), so you need to reach at least 580 overall. As said, you can take one subject test at a time. Your scores on the four independent, modular GED exams do not expire. The four sub-exams cover the academic fields of Mathematical Reasoning Science Social Studies Reasoning through Language Arts GED Arizona Requirements The minimum age in for taking the GED in Arizona is 16. However, 16 and 17-year-olds need to meet some strict additional requirements. Underage test-takers (16 and 17 years of age) qualify if they provide verification that they have formally withdrawn from high school and a notarized, dated, and signed consent statement from a parent or guardian. To qualify for the GED (General Education Development) exam, you must not be enrolled in a school program and not have graduated from a secondary school. In Arizona, there is NO residency requirement, and applicants don't need to attend a prep program. There's also no need to take the GED Ready test prior to taking the real GED test. Only online testers will have to attain satisfactory results on the GED Ready test to qualify. In Arizona, in addition to the four subtests, you also have to pass the state's Civics Test. GED testing can now be done online as well, and the exam is done entirely on a computer in English or Spanish. Prep Classes for the GED Arizona Online preparation is perfectly okay, but you can also choose a traditional GED prep class near you. Select your nearest city to see all the options. To get a GED in Arizona, you need to pass the four independent subtests of the GED High School Equivalency Test. You can register and pay for each of the four GED subtests (modules) at a time. The four tests cover the fields of Mathematics, Language Arts, Social Studies, and Science. What are the GED Arizona testing requirements? In Arizona, you cannot already hold a high school diploma, and you need to be at least 16 years old. For 16 and 17-year-olds, however, additional requirements apply. State residency is not required. Arizona also doesn't require GED test-takers to first attend a GED prep course or reach sufficient scores on a practice test, except when the GED test is taken online. What is the GED Arizona cost? In Arizona, the four GED subtests cost $41 each when taken at a test center or online, so the entire GED battery costs $164. You can take and pay for one subtest at a time. Bear also in mind that to qualify for online testing, you'll need to reach "green" (likely to pass) scores on the GED Ready practice test. There are four of these tests (one for each sub-exam at $7.99), so that's an extra $32! Are updates/adjustments required? Please advise us here. Last Updated on March 30, 2025.
