Been trying to buy a bed frame but they're cancelling my order saying I need to verify identity, which I did, asked them to get it sorted asap cuz I needed this bed to arrive in 4 days max, and the agent been answering me in a disrespectful way, her name is "Rana" honestly if ur giving bad experience to ur costumer at least have good associates working for your site.Date of experience: July 24, 2025Amazon Sellers Lock Spare Parts Behind Warranty - Your Purchase Becomes Trash After 2 YearsRating: ★☆☆☆☆ I bought a swiftly Bicycle through Amazon and while it worked well initially, I've learned the hard way that Amazon sellers and manufacturers design products to fail after their 2-year warranty expires. When a critical part broke recently, I contacted both the seller and manufacturer, only to be told: "Spare parts are only available to warranty holders." Amazon refused to help, redirecting blame entirely to the manufacturer. This isn't just poor customer service—it's planned obsolescence. By withholding basic repair components, they force customers to either discard functional bikes (contributing to e-waste) or pay inflated third-party repair fees. Amazon profits from hosting these sellers while ignoring their role in enabling anti-consumer practices. Why this should concern all buyers: - False economy: A "good deal" becomes a financial burden when reparability is sabotaged.- Environmental negligence: Perfectly good frames end up in landfills over a single missing part.- Amazon's complicity: They profit from sales but take zero responsibility for sellers' restrictive policies. My advice: - Avoid brands that don't openly support #RightToRepair.- Pressure Amazon to mandate spare-part availability for all sellers.- Spread awareness: Share this review—companies only change when their reputation is at risk. Until Amazon holds sellers accountable, assume any product you buy there could be a 2-year ticking time bomb.Date of experience: July 24, 2025Honestly, I think the government or another authority needs to look into how Amazon operates in the UK. They have a monopoly and seem to do whatever they want, with no regard for customers.I ordered an item on Friday with next day delivery. On Saturday, I literally saw the courier downstairs from my balcony, and just minutes later I got a notification saying I had cancelled the order which I absolutely didn't. I reported it and reordered the same item, again with next day delivery.This time, I got a message saying it was delivered to a letterbox. I checked the entire building and nothing had been delivered.I also ordered another item on Friday, also with next day delivery. On Wednesday, Amazon cancelled my order and suspended my account, claiming I violated their return policy. I have not violated anything - I wasn't even receiving the items I ordered in the first place.I'm officially done ordering from Amazon.Date of experience: July 23, 2025Absolutely shocking customer service. Ordered an item, was notified on day of delivery it would be a further 3 days, then on the next day of delivery was informed it would be another 10 days. Lied numerous times by customer services, from it's ready for dispatch and even offered a full refund once the item has arrived.All this time the item remains on Amazon showing next day delivery. The simple solution of them sending the item outand cancelling the original order is beyond them.Date of experience: July 24, 2025I bought a refurbished desktop from them, which was advertised as being in excellent condition. The Amazon Renewed Guarantee states that all of their renewed tech is professionally inspected, tested, and cleaned. However, when I set up the computer, there were so many things wrong with it, including defender being disabled on the hard drive, and the keyboard being stuck in AltGr mode, rendering it unusable. They hadn't even done a factory reset.After so much time talking to customer service representatives, they still refuse to admit that if it had actually been tested, these issues would have been flagged straight away. I now have to take a day off work to send the computer back as they can't arrange for a pickup. Just avoid them in this area. You are not getting what they promise.Date of experience: July 23, 2025A failed delivery with no customer service support to resolve from either Amazon, the seller or courier Evri. Despite my patience attempts to resolve I was sent on a merry go round trying unsuccessful to resolve. This is the 2nd time this has happened recently with Amazon. I have lost faith in thier delivery service and customer support. I have now cancelled my account with them. While I have lost my money for the failed delivery. It was satisfying to leave Amazon knowing that I won't have to put up with their declining service any more.Date of experience: July 09, 2025Parcels never arrives when they send with Evri. Waste of money and time.When called Amazon.. They did not do much. Decided to not use them any more Date of experience: July 23, 2025I am really frustrated by my recent deliveries from Amazon. I have had the wrong product sent out, items not even being delivered, items being left with neighbours which I didn't even know about, items being left with Royal Mail which is a shocking service in its own right, items being left downstairs in the foyer, items being left outside, all this when I have had my delivery preferences the same for many years, it seems my instructions are being ignored. I have used Amazon a lot over the last 5 years at least and I have never encountered this level of bad service before. I am constantly chasing my up my parcels whereabouts. I use Amazon as I am very busy and it has always been convenient. I am guessing they have put a very lazy and idiotic driver on my round. If this pattern continues I'll be cancelling my Amazon prime account and shop elsewhere as I simply don't have the time to be chasing parcels about.Date of experience: July 23, 2025My elderly neighbour had been sent only a charger instead of the phone that was supposed to come with it. Using his handset we were able to contact support who slowly took him through the process required to get his issue sorted. Their patience was inexhaustible and I could see it made my neighbours day. As promised and within the timescales set, he received his full refund. In the end, I wasn't needed for help as the support team were so good dealing with my neighbour. Date of experience: July 20, 2025I Cancelled an item within 5 minutes of ordering it due to changing my mind. Had a message from Amazon saying it was too late to cancel has it had been processed. I won't be using them again.Date of experience: July 23, 2025On 21 July 2025, two unauthorized transactions were made on my credit card through the website (amazon.co.uk) without my knowledge or consent. I immediately reported the issue to my bank, and they advised me to also contact Amazon directly.The two unauthorized charges were:- 4294.20 TL on 21.07.2025 at 02:42 (Turkey time)- 9042.24 TL on 21.07.2025 at 03:10 (Turkey time)The last four digits of the affected credit card are: 3623I attempted to contact your customer support through the chat system, where I was told that I would receive a response within 24-36 hours. However, I have not received any follow-up communication. Since then, I have been unable to access the chat system due to repeated technical errors, and the "Call Me" option is not functional in Turkey, as I cannot enter a Turkish phone number into your system.At this point, I do not know how else to reach you. I urgently request that these two unauthorized transactions be investigated, cancelled immediately, and the full amounts refunded to my credit card.Please confirm receipt of this message and let me know what further steps I need to take. I am also preparing to report this issue to UK-based consumer protection platforms such as Resolver.co.uk and Trustpilot, and will initiate a chargeback with my bank if no resolution is provided.Kind regards, Date of experience: July 21, 2025Had an order from Amazon US and the dispatch date came and went 2 or 3 times, each time extended on the last day. Customer service just kept saying keep waiting with empty platitudes of "Your order is safe with Amazon" but was all a complete farce, always it felt you were being fobbed off and they have no actual ability to help with the order. Ultimately after 2 months they cancelled it without consultation - the item is still available to order by the way. They took payment straight away, of course. I'm convinced most of their customer service is natural language AI. They sell that via AWS so I wouldn't be at all surprised. I was promised follow ups that never came, I had to chase at every step. They insist they are the world's most customer-centric company, but it's all marketing hot air.Date of experience: July 23, 2025I had my account locked without any notification - I just get the alert "Account locked temporarily ... Please contact customer service for further assistance". I have reached out to customer service by chat, phone call, via X Amazon Help and I am being sent around in circles, the promised contact from the account specialist has never happened, I'm still waiting. This is unbelievable. Date of experience: July 01, 2025I've been a frequent Amazon user for years, despite repeated issues. Unfortunately, it's reached a point where I can no longer justify using the platform.Products that are clearly from bargain sites like Temu are listed here at highly inflated prices. Deliveries are unreliable—parcels are often left in communal areas, go missing, or arrive damaged. They consistently use Royal Mail for heavy or fragile items, and it's no surprise that many arrive broken, leaking (e.g. spilled Persil or Fairy Liquid), or in unacceptable condition.Customer service is slow and increasingly frustrating. Rather than resolving problems efficiently, they appear to stall, repeat scripted responses, and make the process unnecessarily difficult, concerning is the recent trend of retroactively charging customers for returned items—months after the return was completed—with emails claiming the tracking number is invalid, even when it was generated by Amazon themselves. I have now cancelled my Prime membership and all Subscribe & Save orders. I will go back to shopping at supermarkets and trusted high street retailers like most people do.Amazon has become more of a headache than a convenience. I hope more customers realise that it's not the only option out there. They've lost my trust completely.Date of experience: July 23, 2025Absolutely hate amazon with a passion, after getting changes on a credit card I contacted them to ask why, even after I changed my order to a deal I seen, I was still charged not one but twice on a credit card I no longer use, cost me a more money. When I called I was on the ohone for 17 minutes and the little girl hung up on me because I wasn't buy her excuses as to why they access my old card. I wouldn't wish bad on anyone, but I hope they go bust and there staff get sacked.I recorded the call as well so as u can show people just how badly this happens, I'll stick it on my YouTube laterz the excuses are unbelievable.Used to use amazon for any little hardly things, never use them again, and yes amazon are probably reading this and thinking cool they'll no miss the 8.99 a month, but people like me do and thanks too you's I'm over 120 pound out of pocket. Thank god for food banks.Date of experience: July 23, 2025Once again, I bought and paid for next delivery. Once again, I'm getting two day delivery. Without this tool, I'm stopped. Date of experience: July 23, 2025Never buy expensive items unless it's dispatched and sold by Amazon.We had an expensive floor cleaner which broke Amazon state they are not responsible as the item was dispatched from Amazon but not sold by them. Odd because I paid you. Weaseled out of Consumer Rights Act 2015. Not interested in helping at all. As the cleaner company is not based or has no repair option in UK. That's the end of it. Thanks Amazon Date of experience: July 22, 2025The delivery time for my printer got delayed so I was unable to get it installed by people who can help me. I asked for the installation service to be added (as it was an option that was available at the time of placing the order) but apparently I have return the goods, cancel the order and re-order. A poor and inefficient system which is not environmentally, business or customer friendly at all. Why can't the extra installation service be paid for separately and added? It's different people delivering and installing anyway. Perhaps Amazon has a monopoly and there is really no incentive for them to improve these processes.Date of experience: July 22, 2025I bought wardrobe from Blisswood only 2 parts arrived didn't let me when it was getting dropped off, on the 4th day contacted customer service, on the 7th day delivery was wrong and 1 of the boxes no were to be seen, got my refund, customer service really helpful, but the I was told I they wouldn't put my review up for there own mistake... Date of experience: July 01, 2025Why is it my delivery driver always takes 3-4 hours to deliver my parcel that is 4 stops away on the same street... this is a regular occurrence, and sometimes I don't even get the parcel which is extremely frustrating! Is there even a way to complain about a driver? Most other companies give you a way to rate and review them... do Amazon even care what their drivers are doing...
